Leg Side Field

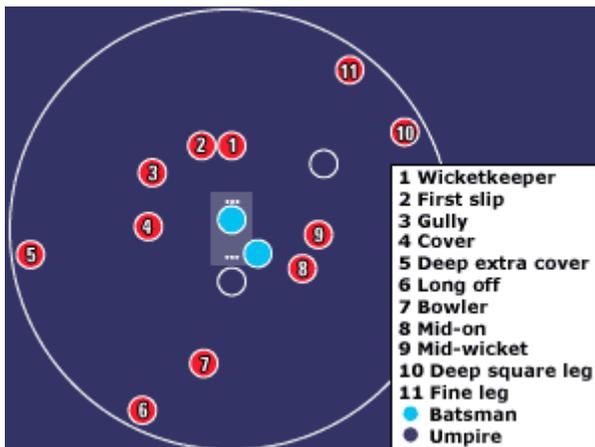

in the air.

Bowling to a leg side field is usually seen as a defensive measure, but it can be used to stem the flow of runs, particularly against a batsman who is especially strong through the on-side.

The employment of a deep square leg could mean that the fielding side will try and tempt the batsman with short pitch bowling that could be pulled or hooked limited.

Defensive Field

A defensive field may be required if you are struggling to contain the opposition batsmen or if a bowler is struggling to bowl a consistent line and length.

By having cover on the boundary on all sides of the ground the chances of the batting side scoring boundaries is
